

Gennady Samorodnitsky (Cornell, Ithaca, USA)

Clustering in large deviations

We describe the cluster of large deviations events that arise when one such large deviations event occurs. We work in the framework of an infinite moving average process with a noise that has finite exponential moments. The difference between short memory and long memory cases is very significant.